

-----
Title: Alchemy And Creation

Author: ***egh***
-----

*Despite the thick binding of the book, only a few pages remain and are understandable*

**ough such means a skilled alchemist could produce a mixture that could be molded into virtually any object or substance. The sole law governing this is that substances can only be *several pages are missing from the book
here*

*absent*

*Absent*

*Absent*

*absent*

*absent*

needed include Blood moss, nightshade, ginseng, as well as the essential elemental bases of whatever substance(s) the alchemist is trying to create. Without said bases, the alchemist will find only a mess of components, instead of a refined solution.

Important is the sequence of application for the ingredients. Each of the reagents must be prepared in liquid form
and stored seperately.
The base components
must aslo be reduced to a liquid form and stored seperately.

When producing the primary mixture, five arcane gems must be placed within the
containment device,
reduced to liquid form.
and an additional five

should be placed around the containment device in a pentagram.

*The remainder of the book has been lost to time, but a page of loose paper has been stuck in the back, covered in notes*

Eyes...substances?

Arcane gems..

Melting points:

Alchemist?

Regs=simple

Containment device?

Sole law=important?